The constitution of India has ensured the exercise of free speech and expression as fundamental rights, however, many writers, artists, works of arts (books/plays/movies/TV serials have to face the wrath of political, religious, regional social groups/organizations. Even the media (print/electronic/social) have not been spared. The judicial interference and verdicts are openly violated by these organized and unorganized establishments. With the intention of academic debates and discussions, the contributions of multilingual scholars from the different parts of the country are being presented in this seminar proceeding.
