HOD Dept. of Commerce

ACS College Gangakhed

Introduction:-

What does the term "Commerce" mean? 1) The United States federal department that promotes and administers domestic and foreign trade (including the patent office and management of reasons) was established in 1913. Commerce has a few senses or meanings. 2) Social exchange, particularly of opinions, attitudes, and other things 3) Transfer (sales and purchases) with the intention of providing goods and services

Since time immemorial, humans have been involved in a variety of developmental activities and have continuously attempted to perfect them by perceiving, observing, studying, analyzing, and recording these activities. Additionally, a particular effort results in the evaluation of a unique study. The Commerce Stream is a well-known academic division that focuses on the body of knowledge. Even though the term "Commerce" is used a lot, it has only been used for activities like buying and selling. If Commerce education was just for buying and selling, no one would go through such an academic journey.

It is possible to assert that commerce education recognizes the majority of social activities. The range of career options offered by commerce education is extensive, ranging from small P.C.O.S. to retail shops to small-scale industries to various state and federal government departments. A person with experience in business and education is needed. Even in the activities of daily life. The understanding of commerce is extremely useful and applicable. Commerce education opens up a wide range of job and career options.

Education in the Professional Course of Commerce:

Medical engineering, computer applications, information technology, and other professional courses are available in science education. There are also a variety of professional courses in commerce education that are in high demand in the current trade and commerce environment. The following are some examples: M.Com. Job

Opportunities for Chartered Accountant Cost & Works Accountant Public Enterprises, Students:

- 1) Teaching;
- 2) Research;
- 3) Examinations by way of competition;
- 4) Specialist Positions;
- 5) Independent Business

Diverse Challenges to the Development of Business Education:

- 1) How people think.
- 2) There are not enough businesses, industries, or trading centers.
- 3) Course difficulty levels in commerce.
- 4) There are a lot of high schools that offer a science program.
- 5) Marathwada lacks high-quality education.
- 6) A lack of awareness regarding the significance of business education.
- 7) Look for it in the curriculum for business classes.
- 8) There is a significant gap between businesses, industries, and employment agencies and educational establishments.
- 9) Inadequate infrastructure and flawed government policies threatening competition from education in management.

Suggestions:

- 1) Career guidance for commerce students in classes IX, X, XI, and XII.
- 2) Modifications to the curriculum.

Conclusion:

Since the environment, input process, and output all impact commerce education, the process is the most crucial factor in determining the system's flaws. Despite the fact that many students have previously taken these courses, significant changes in the content of commerce education have not been possible as a result of a lack of assessment and survey of the changing needs of the business. For more popular Commerce education to be more purpose-oriented, teaching and training should work together. The goal is small and medium-sized businesses, trade, and industry, which requires a lot of supervisory and lower managerial level officers. We can only improve coordination among India's universities to improve the curriculum, library, infrastructure, and remaining courses based on local needs and opportunities, including the new commerce course.
